Traditional classrooms are fast becoming a minority in the education field. As technologies continue to develop as a pervasive aspect of modern society, educators must be trained to meet the demands and opportunities afforded by this technology-rich landscape. The Handbook of Research on Teacher Education in the Digital Age focuses on the needs of teachers as they redesign their curricula and lessons to incorporate new technological tools. Including theoretical frameworks, empirical research, and best practices, this book serves as a guide for researchers, educators, and faculty and professional developers of distance learning tools.

Every parent wants to help their child succeed, but it can be difficult when online platforms and teaching methods seem to be constantly changing. Now, A Parent's Guide to Virtual Learning takes the mystery out of digital education and gives you the tools that you can immediately implement at home, no matter your district, school, or distance learning model.

Writing, for most students, is a difficult process. Many students struggle finding ways to successfully communicate on paper. Many students struggle finding ways to successfully communicate on paper. The purpose of this action research project was to evaluate whether or not the implementation of technology in a fifth grade writing class would increase students' ability to brainstorm ideas, edit, and create an organized, detailed writing sample. This study involved an intervention within a fifth grade classroom and adhered to the language arts curriculum that was used at Saint Joan of Arc School. This intervention was conducted with a fifth grade class; one half acted as an experimental group and the other served as the control group. Data was collected
