Miller Test Prep's study guide for the ACCUPLACER is the solution for students who want to maximize their score and minimize study time. Our study guides are carefully designed to provide only that clear and concise information you need. That's precisely why we put "Clear & Concise" on our cover. The standard for the study guide industry is to "throw in the kitchen sink" when it comes to making a book, meaning you are stuck with hundreds of pages of repetitive information, redundant and confusing examples, and more practice questions than any person could be expected to work through. This results in students feeling overwhelmed, leading to reduced self-confidence, which leads to lower scores! Instead, Miller Test Prep has worked specifically with tutors. Why tutors you ask? Tutors specialize in helping students comprehend information that has already been presented by a teacher. That means they see time and again what students struggle with and what actually works to help them. They specialize in helping students who have previously failed, to succeed. We compiled their decades of experience helping students just like you into this study guide, so you pass the first time! In this ACCUPLACER book, we ensure you are thoroughly prepared for this critically important test: Comprehensive review of all ACCUPLACER exam sections: Reading Comprehension Sentence Skills Write Placer Mathematics Step-by-step examples for every concept tested Practice test questions like the real exam Detailed, thorough answer key explanations 6 complete essay examples with scoring explanations

A major challenge for all schools is improving instruction and achievement for all students. Attention has focused on structuring curriculum and courses to increase achievement by increasing the academic rigor of each course, increasing expectations for all students and providing structure and support so all students can access high quality, content-rich instruction. Changes such as eliminating lower level courses, adding additional courses that are designed to remediate or accelerate specific skills and increasing diploma requirements are being considered by school communities as ways to increase student achievement and assure all stakeholders that students receiving diplomas have the skills necessary for post-secondary success. This study focuses on student transcripts and test scores at Cape Henlopen High School. It is an in-depth look at the course taking procedures and patterns of four cohorts of 9th and 10th grade English students. Student transcripts and standardized test scores served as the basis for analyzing placement in courses, grades in courses, and examining the relationship between course taking patterns and performance on the state assessment. The study included 1,010 students who recently graduated or are still attending Cape Henlopen High School. 8th grade English teachers were surveyed about how they make their recommendations for student course placement in 9th grade English and this process is explained in detail. 9th grade English teachers participated in a focus group which discussed differences in instruction, student composition and expectation at each level of 9th grade English to provide an understanding of the educational experience for students in each course level. Finally, guidance counselors were interviewed about how communication about scheduling, course offerings and course requirements with parents, staff, students and the community occurs. The findings show that students have different educational experiences that are directly linked to the level of course they took. There is a pattern of placement in differentiated courses---minorities and males are overrepresented in the lower level courses and barely present in the higher level courses. Comparing test data with student course taking finds that students who went into high school with the same standardized test scores in 8th grade show a difference in their 10th grade test that is directly related to the level of 9th and 10th grade English courses they took. Not many students move up or down course levels, but of those who do, most move down. Overall, the study confirms that the level of course makes a difference on the educational experience of students.
