Julius Kambarage Nyerere was to travel far from home during his early life. This was unusual for most young men born in Tanganyika Territory. But if at one level Nyerere was an unusual young man – thanks largely to the privileges that came with his father's chiefly status – then at another level his early life was fairly ordinary.

A uniquely detailed portrayal of the formative years of Tanzania's first president and the influences that led him to enter politics.

In this text, international figures, such as Father Huddleston and Sir Shridath Ramphal, join with Tanzanian scholars to assess, not without criticism, the influential contributions of Julius Nyerere both within his own country and across the Third World. Part 1 provides an overview of the man and his thought. Part 2 focuses on those areas of policy in which Nyerere took a particular interest. Part 3 concentrates on the major social, economic and political issues that have been central to the unique Tanzanian experience - unique because of the man who shaped the first quarter of a century of independence.

With vision, hard-nosed judgment, and biting humor, Julius Nyerere confronted the challenges of nation building in modern Africa. Constructing Tanzania out of a controversial Cold War union between Tanganyika and Zanzibar, Nyerere emerged as one of independent Africa's most influential leaders. He pursued his own brand of African socialism, called Ujamaa, with unquestioned integrity, and saw it profoundly influence movements to end white minority rule in Southern Africa. Yet his efforts to build a peaceful nation created a police state, economic crisis, and a war with Idi Amin's Uganda. Eventually—unlike most of his contemporaries—Nyerere retired voluntarily from power, paving the way for peaceful electoral transitions in Tanzania that continue today. Based on multinational archival research, extensive reading, and interviews with Nyerere's family and colleagues, as well as some who suffered under his rule, Paul Bjerk provides an incisive and accessible biography of this African leader of global importance. Recognizing Nyerere's commitment to participatory government and social equality while also confronting his authoritarian turns and policy failures, Bjerk offers a portrait of principled leadership under the difficult circumstances of postcolonial Africa.

Mwalimu Julius Kambarage Nyerere was the First President and father of the Nation, Tanzania. He was an intellectual, scholar, and a Mwalimu (teacher). He articulated his beliefs and principles. He eloquently shared them in a clear and simple way that could be easily understood by all people regardless of their tribe, race, gender, political affiliation, religion, young and old; intellectuals as well as those who never went through formal education. He was consistent, committed, courageous and persuasive in expressing his views, both in word and actions as his personal contribution to the people-centered development of all Tanzanians and the people of Africa. Indeed he was a teacher whose words, personal practices and writings continue to communicate practical meaning long after his death. He had a Vision on Education for Tanzania. "Mwalimu Julius Kambarage Nyerere vision of Education is directed towards an authentic vision of Education, an education which strives to promote the value of the equality of all men and women, respect for humanity's freedom for all, the right and duty for all individuals and groups to participate in all decisions relating to their well-being, the necessity for work by all, and unity, as pillars of the type of Tanzanian nation he wished and laboured to contribute to its realization."

Nyerere's economic policies, his successes and failures in pursuit of economic development under socialism, are some of the subjects addressed by the author in this book. A Tanzanian himself., he also looks at how life was under Nyerere since the sixties. The work is also a critical examination of the political situation in Tanzania since independence when the country was known as Tanganyika before uniting with Zanzibar. The author also looks at the transition that has taken place in Tanzania from one-party rule to multiparty democracy, and from socialism to capitalism since the collapse of the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War. He also takes a critical look at globalization and the negative impact of structural adjustment programmes in Tanzania and Africa as a whole. The work is also a study of Tanzania's history since the advent of colonial rule and of the struggle for independence in one of Africa's largest countries.

A compelling account of the establishment of Tanzania's stable and ambitious government in the face of external threats and internal turmoil.
