No-Code application development platforms have seen a major rise in popularity in the last decade, primarily because these platforms offer a great way for businesses and other organizations to develop apps that meet their needs without having to involve professional software developers. Due to the lack of programming code in order to create that app, no-code is your answer. If you know what you want to build, no-code platforms allow you to assemble a working program that follows best programming practices just by dragging and dropping components onto a screen. Of course it helps to have done some research into no-code apps including current trends,
