Thwart my wistful way did a damsel saunter, Fair, the while unformed to be all-eclipsing; "Maiden meet," held I, "till arise my forefelt Wonder of women." Long a visioned hermitage deep desiring, Tenements uncouth I was fain to house in; "Let such lodging be for a breath-while," thought I, "Soon a more seemly.

Long shadows at daybreak, white trails in the sky, Red poppies, green fields, and stork nests on high. And sunsets so beautiful they make you cry. El Camino de Santiago. Yellow arrows to follow day after day. Concrete stele with shells showing the way. Vineyards, cherries, fields full of hay. El Camino de Santiago.

From first to last 'twas a proud career! And your sunny years with a gracious wife. Have brought you a daughter dear. 5. " I watched her to-day; a more comely maid, As she danced in her muslin bowed with blue, Round a Hintock maypole never gayed. " . — " Aye, aye; I watched her this day, too, As it happens, " the Sergeant said.

"Santiago Villafania writes a poised, sensual poetry (poised and sensual may almost seem like contradictions, but his art lies in their effortless combination). He is never boring or predictable, thanks to his diverse background, his discriminating ear, his impeccable good taste--which, on occasion, he rightly flouts, due to a poetic exigency or imperative urgency." - Ute Margaret Saine, poet, translator, editor

In June of 1929, Federico Garcia Lorca left his native Spain on a journey that would become a vision-quest through New York City, the Vermont countryside, and Cuba. While he failed miserably at learning English during his brief sojourn at Columbia University, he nonetheless created a powerful new poetic idiom to voice his perceptions of social injustice and apocalyptic retribution. Guided by the duende, liminal principle of creativity and death, Lorca represents New York as dystopia cum Armageddon, ultimately redeemed by the Blacks of Harlem and the telluric forces unleashed to retake the decadent, soulless civilization of North America.

Throughout the 1960s until her untimely death in 1974, Afro-Cuban filmmaker Sara G ó mez engaged directly and courageously with the social, political, economic, and cultural transformations promised by the Cuban Revolution. G ó mez directed numerous documentary films in 10 prolific years. She also made De cierta manera (One way or another), her only feature-length film. Her films navigate complex experiences of social class, race, and gender by reframing revolutionary citizenship, cultural memory, and political value. Not only have her inventive strategies become foundational to new Cuban cinema and feminist film culture, but they also continue to inspire media artists today who deal with issues of identity and difference. The Cinema of Sara G ó mez assembles history, criticism, biography, methodology, and theory of G ó mez's work in scholarly writing; interviews with friends and collaborators; the film script of De cierta manera; and a detailed and complete filmography. Featuring striking images, this anthology reorients how we tell Cuban cinema history and how we think about the intersections of race, gender, and revolution. By addressing G ó mez's entire body of work, The Cinema of Sara G ó mez unpacks her complex life and gives weight to her groundbreaking cinema.

Pinabli and Other Poems consists of over 200 anlongs (poems), some of these poems in English translated into Spanish, a few haikus and translations of poems by writers who had inspired him like Jose Garcia Villa and e.e. cummings. Most deal with love, which he describes in a language full of imagery and lyricism. Many believe that the Pangasinan language would have died if it weren't for the efforts of Villafania and his colleagues who with great dedication worked against all odds to ensure revival of the language after the long hiatus for Pangasinan literature that lasted for 30 years (1960-90)."Rarely, if ever, has Pangasinan poetry sounded so fierce and tender, sacred and earthy. Santiago Villafania's poetry illuminates the Pangasinan soul, language, culture and identity. His book Pinabli and Other Poems is both delicate and bold; a real contribution to our national literature." -F. Sionil Jos é , National Artist for Literature

First, artisanal-quality book of poetry and art by Joseph Jason Santiago LaCour.60 pages. This book is beautiful. Before you even get to the words, you can feel the love that's gone into it's creation. The author meticulously chose every ingredient. Laser-printed on 60 lb off-white paper that's easy on the eyes. Produced locally in Santa Cruz, CA with a genuine desire to contribute to our shared growth. The work reflects years of writing, reciting, drawing using art as a sanctuary from the hardships of family/work life. Positive and self-empowering.
